Airman's Grave Is Found In Germany

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Nafziger have received word from R.C.A.F. headquarters that the grave of their son, Flying Officer John Alden Nafziger, has been located. Flying Officer Nafziger was posted as missing on Oct. 28, 1944, and was later presumed dead. His grave has now been located at Hurth, Germany, and removal has been made to the Reichswald Forest British Military Cemetery.

The letter received from the R. C.A.F. Casualty Officer states, in part:

"Information obtained from German documents indicated that Flight Sergeant Greenhalgh, Sergeant Hawkins, Flying Officer Fitchner, Flight Sergeant Smith and the remaining members of the crew were buried in the cemetery at Hurth, Germany, and that your son's aircraft was shot down at 3 p.m., October 28, 1944, southwest of Hurth. Hurth is located approximately 41 miles southwest of Cologne, Germany.

The Missing Research and Enquiry Services on investigating the German reports located the grave of your son and the remainder of the crew in the Hurth cemetery. Your son and his crew members have now been concentrated to the Reichswald Forest British Military Cemetery in accordance with the policy that all aircrew personnel buried in Germany should be transferred to British War Cemeteries. This cemetery is located six miles north-northwest of Goch, Germany.

To this date, grave numbers allotted to your son's crew in the Reichswald Forest British Military Cemetery have not been received, but immediately we receive these the number of your son's grave will be forwarded to you.

This is one of the permanent military cemeteries in Germany and will be turned over shortly to the Imperial War Graves Commission who will be responsible for reverent and perpetual care of the resting places of our dead. The cemeteries will be beautified by landscaping and the planting of shrubs and flowers. A stone wall will be erected around the cemetery and a headstone placed on each grave. The task of preparing and erecting these headstones will naturally take considerable time. It is not necessary to write to the Imperial War Graves Commission as you will be contacted by them before the stone is prepared.

May I again offer my sincere sympathy at the loss of your gallant son."

TREES

TREES have played a great and gracious part in making Alberta a land of homes. Ask any ten Albertans to think of a word starting with "T" and the chance is four of them will say "trees" and six will say "trees." This proves that the majority prefer to dwell on the beautiful and the good, rather than the sad and the bitter.

Trees are the soothing influence which offset the madness of energy invoked by Alberta's sun. They are God's temples, bringing peace and release and quiet contemplation. We could do with more of them.

There are people in Alberta who never fail to salute a thriving tree. These are mostly the earlier settlers, those who recall the time when the cities and towns of the province lay bare and unprotected, with never a leaf between them and the skies. They were a pathetic unlovely sight, and many a home seeker of those days was swept with longing for the stately groves and shady paths of older, kinder countries. Although Alberta in her virginal days, boasted wooded spaces in plenty, these were not where man elected to build his habitation. So nature and man united in bringing the woods to the homes.

In the space of a few decades, the scene is completely altered. In the cities, long avenues of trees cast about them a spell of mellowness and dignity. Scarcely a town but is boulevarded and tree sheltered, and the humblest home now nestles in the shade of protecting branches. From any high vantage point one may see as far as the eye can reach, groves and windbreaks scattered at intervals. These mark the rural homes of people who love trees for their grace and loveliness, as well as for their practical worth.

It is this miracle of growth within one generation which makes of every tree a personal friend. In those earlier days there was no town planning, no expert advice. Every urge was individual, and perhaps haphazard. But into the planting of every sapling, brought up from the riverside, went dreams of home and permanence, of a time when children would play under ever-widening branches, and when birds would gather there.

In all the countryside there is no more pitiful sight than a tree, dying or dead of thirst. It carries with it some of the heart and courage of the one who planted it. When the valiant trees fall, the spirit of man and woman cannot long endure.

A house, denied the companionship of murmuring leaves, is not a home. It is little more than a temporary stopping place, a spot to get away from.

Pertinent Topics

Discussed by H.C.

Any review of R. B. Bennett's career as Prime Minister is incomplete without reference to one achievement for which he gained scant thanks from the beneficiaries. He came into office three years after the depression had hit agriculture and one year after it had staggered industry and finance. He had promised to blast his way into markets and he did just that when he negotiated the British Empire treaties as a result of which Canada made a much more speedy recovery than the United States.

He got little credit for it but plenty blame and abuse. If he heard of or read it, he must have marvelled that the Prime Minister allowed Mr. St. Laurent to declare recently that those trade arrangements are still precious and will not lightly be abandoned by Canadians. That's not the way most people "heard" it from the present government or its press.

The social security measures which he passed just before going to the country were supported by Mr. King and Mr. Lapointe although they declared them unconstitutional. After winning the elections they did not wait for any one else to make a move—they themselves contested the constitutionality before the Privy Council. The law lords knew there had been a change of government; that the author of the acts had been defeated; that the appellants were now in power and the acts were therefore adjudged ultra vires.

The results remain to this day in unsettled and unsettling jurisdictional disputes. The decision of the courts was demonstrably wrong in some cases, but, as has been stated before, the law lords have adopted the policy of regarding election returns in arriving at a verdict in such cases. The Liberal leaders gave them the cut by initiating the appeal against the bills which they had voted for while "fearing" they were ultra vires.

To win the election in 1930 was itself a great achievement for it was in that campaign, as a later investigation showed that the government went to the country with a fund of $720,000 derived from one source alone—the Beauharnois Corporation. The parliamentary committee brought in a report that was unanimous until Ian Mackenzie backed down, for which he has been rewarded handsomely. That was the time when Mr. King said his party was in the Valley of Humiliation.

A sidelight on Mr. Bennett's character was displayed at that time. He had evidence that Mr. King had paid a visit to Bermuda when Senator Macdougall and the party organizer were there and that his expenses amounting to about $700 had been paid by the Corporation. At Mr. King's request Mr. Bennett agreed not to produce that evidence, and it would not have been produced but for the insistence of a C.C.F. member from Alberta. The Senator alleged the payment was a mistake made by his secretary, and the money was returned to the Corporation.

R. B. must often have wondered if there was a public conscience in Canada. Before these facts were known the electors had placed him in power. After they were known they rejected him. Mr. King lost no votes because his organizers had accepted that large contribution from a corporation looking for a charter which it was granted. Mr. Bennett won no votes because he and his organizer, the late Senator A. D. McRae, rejected an offer of $150,000 from the same source.

Increases in old age pensions have a popular appeal to political parties and always will until the public learn to mistrust the most profligate promoters.

There will be keen disappointment in the failure of the Big Three conference at Paris to come to an agreement, but it will be confined to the infatuated who cling to the belief that Russia under the present regime really wants peace and who talk as if the Soviets were overgrown children who may get cross and nasty unless they are babied and pampered. This result was bound to ensue and one might have added the sooner the better were it not for the numbers and subversive influence of those aforementioned infatuated.

From henceforth the public should keep an eye on those infatuated. In the meantime their friends should tell them in kindly terms that they are not advanced thinkers but weak-minded dolts, not intellectuals but plain damned fools, out of whom lavals and quislings are made.

Nothing is lost if Russia quits the U.N. altogether, because nothing could be gained so long as her diplomats had veto command in the councils. They are not going to quit however, while the boring from within is prosperous. When they do quit it will be good riddance.

Nearly 12,000 people in Alberta have registered as donors for the Red Cross in the blood transfusion service. But 20,000 donors, willing to donate twice a year, will be required to supply free blood and plasma to Alberta hospitals. Ninety-four branches of Red Cross are seeking donors. High River is urgently asking that those interested make out the applications.

Pensions Up $5.00 Per Month

Legislation relating to old age pensions is before the Commons and likely to be approved.

The old age pension legislation would provide, conditional on new pension agreements with the provinces, for a $5-a-month increase in existing basic payments for the blind and the aged, retroactive to May 1, would increase the amount a pensioner may earn without suffering a reduction in pension and would broaden the class of those who may receive pensions.

Under existing statutes the basic pension is $20 a month, with 75 per cent paid by the Dominion and the remainder by the province. In 1943, the federal government granted a $5-a-month wartime supplement to pensioners. All provinces except Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island paid an additional $5 supplement.

Under the new legislation, the wartime supplement. This means it will pay 75 per cent of $30, or 75 per cent of the pension now prevailing in the province, whichever is the lesser.

Now, a single old age pensioner is entitled only to $425 annually inclusive of pension. Under the new bill he could receive $600 inclusive of pension without suffering a reduction of pension. The total income of a single blind person now is limited to $500 annually, but that ceiling will be raised to $720.

It also removes a provision that required a pensioner to be a British subject. Anyone who meets residence qualifications now can apply for a pension.

The agreements with the provinces will provide for cases where a pensioner moves from one province to another to benefit from higher pension rate.

John Bracken, Conservative leader, in criticism said that the legislation was too long delayed and provided only partial justice. He also inquired about Indian pensions.

Health Minister Martin in presenting the bill, spoke of the effect in various provinces.

"Take the case of Alberta, for example. This province is already paying a combined pension and supplemental allowance amounting to $30 a month. Of this amount the Alberta government is currently paying $11.25, made up as follows: $6.25 a month as Alberta's share of the $25 pension provided by the federal law and wartime orders-in-council, and an additional provincial bonus of $5 a month which has been paid since 1942.

The federal share payable at present is $13.75 a month, which, under the provision of the amending bill, will be increased to $22.50 a month. If Alberta does no more than continue its present payment from provincial funds amounting to $11.25 a month, this sum, together with the increased federal contribution of $22.50, will mean that Alberta can actually raise its pension rate to $33.75 a month without additional cost per pensioner to the province over what it is paying at present.

99% WEED KILL! 1½ GALS. WATER AN ACRE! Using 2, 4-D with Spray Boom

Extensive experiments last spring in California, conducted by National Grain Company's own research department, have disclosed revolutionary methods of killing mustard and other weeds with 2,4-D, using as little as 1½ gallons of water an acre. Nozzles for low volume or fog application are not yet available in quantities. This work is part of a continuing program of research and development on the part of National Grain Company aimed at increasing farmers' income.

Again spray boom application of 2, 4-D chemical weed killer is proved superior. To the many advantages of this method, now add the tremendous advantage of using far less water. Spray boom application is—

Poison Ivy

Every year many adults, and especially children, are accidentally poisoned from contact with Poison Ivy. Susceptible persons need only touch a plant to be afflicted with severe skin inflammations and water blisters. Persons who learn to recognize and then to avoid Poison Ivy can save themselves much discomfort and inconvenience.

Description. Poison Ivy is a woody perennial shrub which multiplies by seed and underground rootstocks. In the prairie provinces it is usually not over 12 to 18 inches in height. The leaves of Poison Ivy always consist of three leaflets. The old saying, "Leaflets three, let it be," reminds us of the one sure way to spot Poison Ivy. The leaflets are usually oval in shape. They are smooth, at least on the upper surface, and have even margins (not toothed or notched). The flowers and berries are clustered in the axils of the leaves. The berries are usually creamy-white in colour. A photograph of Poison Ivy has been reproduced on a printed leaflet. Copies may be obtained, free of charge, from Line Elevator grain buyers. School teachers should avail themselves of this opportunity.

Control. Since Poison Ivy is largely confined to the margins of woods, eradication is difficult. However, when found in picnic grounds, summer resorts, and other grounds frequented by people, particularly children, it should be rooted out and burned. If hand pulling is undertaken, rubber boots and gloves should be worn, and all clothing washed after the job is completed. Spraying with sodium chlorate will afford effective control of Poison Ivy, though at least two applications are usually necessary.

Treatment for Poisoning. Many remedies have been suggested to ease the burning and irritation caused by Poison Ivy. The United States Public Health Service recommends a 10 per cent alcoholic solution of tannic acid applied as a lotion. If poisoning is severe, a physician should be consulted before any home remedies are applied.

Twister Struck Vulcan the Evening of July 8th, 1927. Causing Much Property Damage

Many residents of the town and district will remember the tornado that struck twenty years ago on July 8th, causing considerable property damage on farms in its path and in the town itself.

Common in many parts of the States, the formation of such a "twister" this far north is a very unusual occurrence. The 1927 tornado was thought to have formed in the vicinity of the Little Bow river southwest of Vulcan and, advancing on the town, had the appearance of a churning, funnel-shaped spiral reaching to the ground, the upper part of the funnel lost in ominous, madly-churning clouds which covered the greater part of the sky. Appearance of the tornado was preceded by thunder and lightning, accompanied by light rain and intermittent hail with stones the size of eggs.

The farms of J. Mallory, Chris Zahnd, G. Galloway, Mr. Barker, Chauncey Layman, Johnny Johnston, Hamilton Johnston and Harry Adams all suffered damage to a varying degree. On the W. J. Montgomery dairy farm a cow barn 170x40 feet was reduced to splintered boards and the house punctured in many places by flying debris. The iron pump was raised from the well several feet and given a bend and a twist. On the Harry Adams farm a good-sized building was lifted into the air in its entirety and burst in mid-air as though it had exploded.

Crops were practically uninjured and there was no loss of life, but there were many narrow escapes both on these farms and in town.

Jumping from the Montgomery farm to the town, the whirling funnel struck down telephone and electric light poles here and there throughout the town. One of the hardest-hit places was the curling rink, which was almost totally wrecked. Part of the skating rink roof was torn off and holes punched through the building. The residence of Con Kettleson was damaged by flying sections of the curling rink. The Burrows Garage (now the Central) had one tile wall blown out and lost most of its windows. At Roy Ferguson's livery barn, the tornado appeared to lift the roof and then let it drop on the rest of the building, squashing the whole structure into a shapeless mass. There was much minor damage, such as chimneys taken away, fences, flagpoles and garages blown down, etc.

NEWS OF INTEREST

Between 3500 and 5000 Mennonites are leaving Manitoba for South America, and more than 1000 Hutterites from Alberta are reported as going to Paraguay.

Although Prince Edward Island is a prohibition province, the Islanders managed to consume $1,188,855 worth of alcoholic beverages in 1946. This was all for medicinal purposes, and is an indication of the precarious health of Islanders. At first glance they are a husky, stalwart breed, but inside they have a lot of miseries for which liquor on prescription is apparently the standard cure.

Sugar Ration Off in U.S.A.

On that glad day, when sugar rationing went off in U.S.A., Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Teatsworth and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Smith were right on hand for the extra spoonful. They were at Caldwell, Idaho, at the time, and this is a centre of sugar beet irrigation. A big sugar company of that area put out 650,000 pounds of sugar to the local trade, but there was no fear of depletion because the same sugar company had 22 million pounds in storage at nearby Nampa.

The Teatsworth and Smith party had a very pleasant holiday. They had intended going to Idaho by Glacier park but it was closed, so they went by way of Helena, Montana, traveling in the rain till they got into Southern Idaho. After that it was fine.

Caldwell, Idaho is a very rich and fertile irrigated country. Land runs from $400 to $1000 an acre and brings good returns. Sugar beets are a big crop, averaging 20 to 25 tons to the acre at $14.50 a ton. They count on three crops of alfalfa a year, 3 tons to the acre, and $20 a ton. Potatoes, onions, lettuce and such crops are also largely grown and are profitable. The city of Caldwell has a population of about 10,000 and is scenically situated and a very pretty town. Roses were blooming everywhere. The Bing cherry crop was on and other fruits were in abundance. It appeared to be a very religious centre with 18 churches and two more on the way.

Plan now to attend the Vulcan Lions Rodeo on July 12-19.
